The Mayan Calendar end-date awaits...

We stand just over three years away from the long anticipated Mayan Calendar end-date of the 21st of December, the winter solstice of 2012. For more than a decade the anticipation has been building and since the anti-climactic advent of the Millennium more and more people have turned to this date with wonderment, some with dread and some with a message of hope for humanity.

Many prophets, seers and mystics have claimed to know the secrets behind the mysterious Maya and the reason why that date was so revered by them so long ago.

Does a closer look at some of the theories, prophecies and personalities behind the current end-date expectations reveal a glimmer of truth behind the hype?
