THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT POISONERS

In Southampton three quarters of all those polled said NO to fluoride in the water. Gordon Brown said "The Choice must be a local one". Alan Johnson former Health Boss said "a rejection of fluoridation for Southampton would be a "blow" to his hopes to see it become widespread across England, but accepted the decision must be made locally. So despite all this the Strategic Health Authority decides to go ahead anyway. It seems that fluoride is coming your way regardless of public opinion, especially as the new Health Secretary Andy Burnham is a former vice chairman of The Fluoridation Society - you really couldn't make this up, could you?

Lawrence Wright will be testing your tap water so bring your samples in a bottle to the meeting. He will also be demonstrating a portable reverse osmosis machine and covering some of the other hazards lurking in your tap water. Lawrence will also be bringing an expert on water filtration systems with him to help with the demonstrations and give expert advice.
